

Net neutrality is critical. Most Americans only have one choice for internet provider. Therefore, it should be regulated with Title 2 oversight. FCC commissioners should first and foremost represent the interests of the American public. Allowing ISPs to have this degree of influence on the content on the internet is a giveaway which only represents corporate interests, not the public.